Handicrafts are symbols of tradition and roots, they occupy a preponderant place in the productive activities of our people, since in them we see our origins and customs reflected.

When we talk about crafts, there is something much deeper than an exclusive piece made with those representative products of our region, behind all of this are the artisans with their culture and each of their pieces which are a small expression of everything they are.

THE FILIGREE

In Santa Fe de Antioquia the blocks guard a past of cobblestone streets and mansions with colorful colonial facades, large portals, windows and hallways surrounding their courtyards.

While many artisan techniques have left without trace; the filigree has been preserved occupying a very important place in population's life. It has passed his survival test over and over again with honors. The demand continues through the years; sufficient merit to access the title of cultural heritage of the city and of all Antioquia citizens.

THE GUARNIELERIA

The town of Jerico, nestled in the western cordillera, is the cradle of a very important implement used by the farmers of Antioquia and the Eje Cafetero called Carriel.

It is said that the carriel, cultural symbol of Antioquia, initially known as Guarniel by the craftsmen who make it, adopted its name from the English term "carry all".

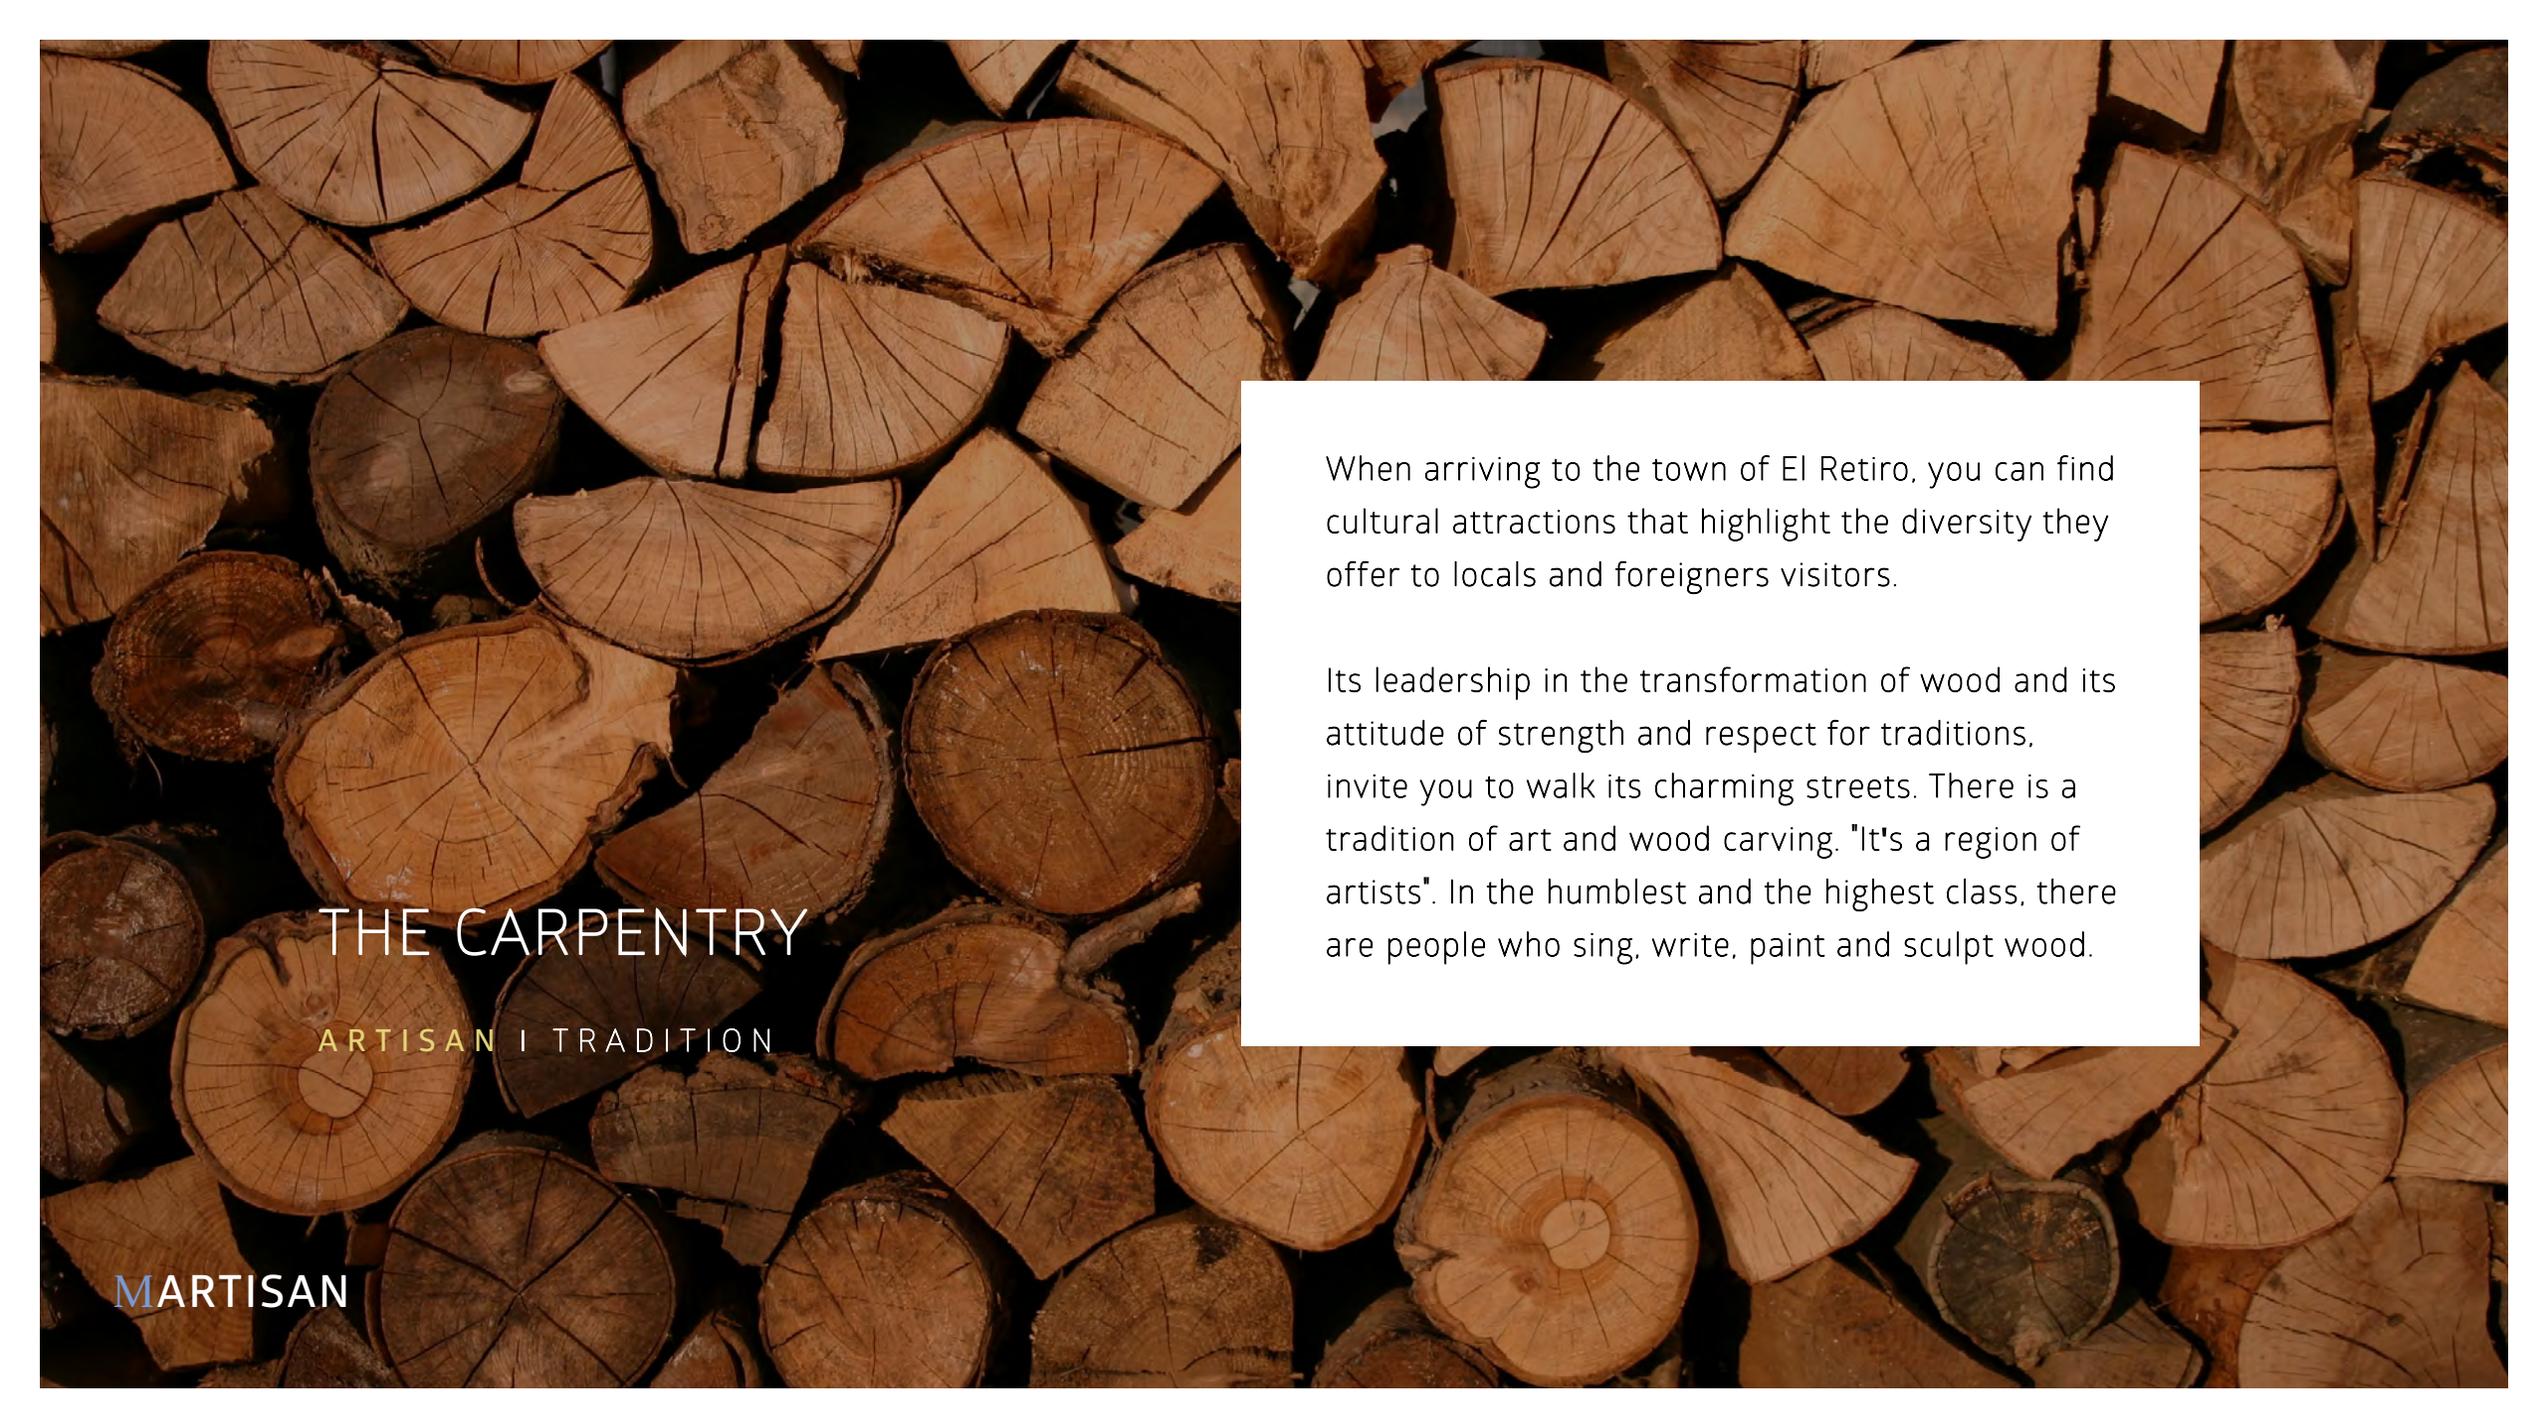

THE CERAMIC

The beginning of the ceramic production dates back to the end of the 19th century, when the entrepreneur Eliseo Pareja arrived to the city. To come to eastern Antioquia means to fall in love with a tradition in which the color of nature and the thoughts of the craftsman are expressed in ceramic pieces.

Carmen de Viboral has brought with it the tradition of ceramics and has become one of the sources of cultural and economic development for their habitants.
